With all the talk on The Netpond Show about cam sites, I wanted to help webmasters understand there payoff and how to use them to your advantage. Its like everything else, its a sponsorship that can make you money that you get on the table. If you don't use look at what they offer the surfer. Price, ease of sign up for the surfer, how the cam girls actually are working. There is a big difference between a good cam girl and a bad one. If a sponsor has a lot of bad ones, then this can lead to a lot of spent traffic. The best cam girls are funny. They don't just sit there pushing surfers to join. They will do a peak, a boob flash here and there. If a surfer says "show me your feet." They will show them there feet for a second, and comment something like, "I would love to wrap my feet around your cock," but leave it at that, not jumping in with "if you want more pay for it." They talk to surfers as if the surfer is a friend, not a buying customer. If its buy buy buy, it will turn a paying customer away. Take the time to learn the girls, the best looking cam girl can fall flat on her face if she doesn't know how to work the surfer. How do you learn which ones are best to send a surfer to, take the time, be a surfer. If your choosing a girl or couple etc. to send traffic to, watch them for about 5 minutes, does she flirt, or is she all about pushing a sale. Don't get me wrong surfers have to be pushed to sales, but too much is not a good thing. A good cam girl shows how to work not only her regulars, but also the new surfer that she has never seen before. Does she pay attention to only the ones she knows? Does she say "Hi to everyone that joins," or does she just ignore someone when they join. Personalization is very important. Surfers want to connect, if there is no connection then, the surfer will just go away.

Now that you know a little about finding the right cam girl, whats the best way to link up to them. If your running say a BBW free site or gallery, the text could read "like what you see, click here to find a live girl just like our model doing what you want her to do." Or want a cute little thing to do as you command then click this link and go live, and be a commander. Linking straight to a specific cam girl has it's down fall because cam girls come and go. Then they have times when they show up, and leave. Its hard to get a surfer to figure out there is others like her he can see and talk to, when you send them to just one cam girl. In this case I do prefer cam sponsors that have a Java form or system that shows what girls are on at that time in a small table showing maybe 4 or 5 samples of who is on. Couples, Girl Girl, Gay and Transsexual, they can be a huge money maker, if presented in the same niche site as the cam. Surfers will never admit it, but transsexual is that taboo subject to many. But there curious so you can get them with sales text that comes off like its that mysterious thing they always wanted to know about. Something like, "Boobies with a tick attached, its and in your face, click this link. With couples its more of wanna see real hardcore sex performed right before your eyes live and in your face. You command the action. This works well with any hardcore gallery, or free site. Selling cams is no different than selling any other pay program, I have found it easier because the surfer is seeing it right on there screen live. I am always asked the question, which is better percentage or pay per sign up. If your just starting out, I would suggest the percentage because the huge payouts you see, of up to $120 is on a tier system, and can take up to 1000 or more sign ups per month to get that rate. If you have a cam girl that is damn good, and gets a sugar daddy to go throw your link code, you will make more over time. I have one surfer that every month like clock work, spends $100 every week on Sunday. I hope this helped you understand a little more about cams. There like any other niche, it takes you a while to learn them, but once you do, they can increase your profits. Just kind of an FYI Netpond Cash has Cams Uncovered, its may promote much but I do really well with there cams.
